TRIED & TESTED

Pricey indulgence

PRODUCT: Kerastase Elixir Ultime Hair

PROMISE: Deep nourishment, smoothing effect and shiny, weightless hair

TESTER'S HAIR TYPE: Normal, straight

PROS: The bottle's pump-dispenser makes it easy to take in just the right amount of oil, which feels superbly smooth. It spreads beautifully over the scalp and along the length of our hair, much like a conditioner. When used as a "pre-cleanser" before shampooing (we used it on two occasions — leaving it overnight once and for half an hour before going to shower the second time), the hair is left feeling soft and visibly shiny. It works well as a leave-in conditioner too; the mid-lengths and ends feel less dry post application.

CONS: Even though usage directions claim that two to three pumps will be enough, a minimum of six to seven pumps is needed to cover the entire scalp when used as a pre-cleanser. The inhibitive price of ₹2,200 for a 125ml bottle also makes the product out of reach for many.

VERDICT: If you can afford the product, buy it for its almost instant effect of making your hair feel nourished. But regular application of any normal hair oil would do the same.
